SEAS European macro-regions: digitalisation and data sharing for safer and more sustainable maritime transport

Serena Epis | 17/3/2022

Digitalisation and technological innovation are key to the development of the European maritime industry. Digital services for communicating data and information are increasingly essential to ensure better connectivity and safer, more sustainable navigation in European waters

RESOURCES Water, a common plan for the two shores of the Adriatic

Marco Ranocchiaro | 22/3/2022

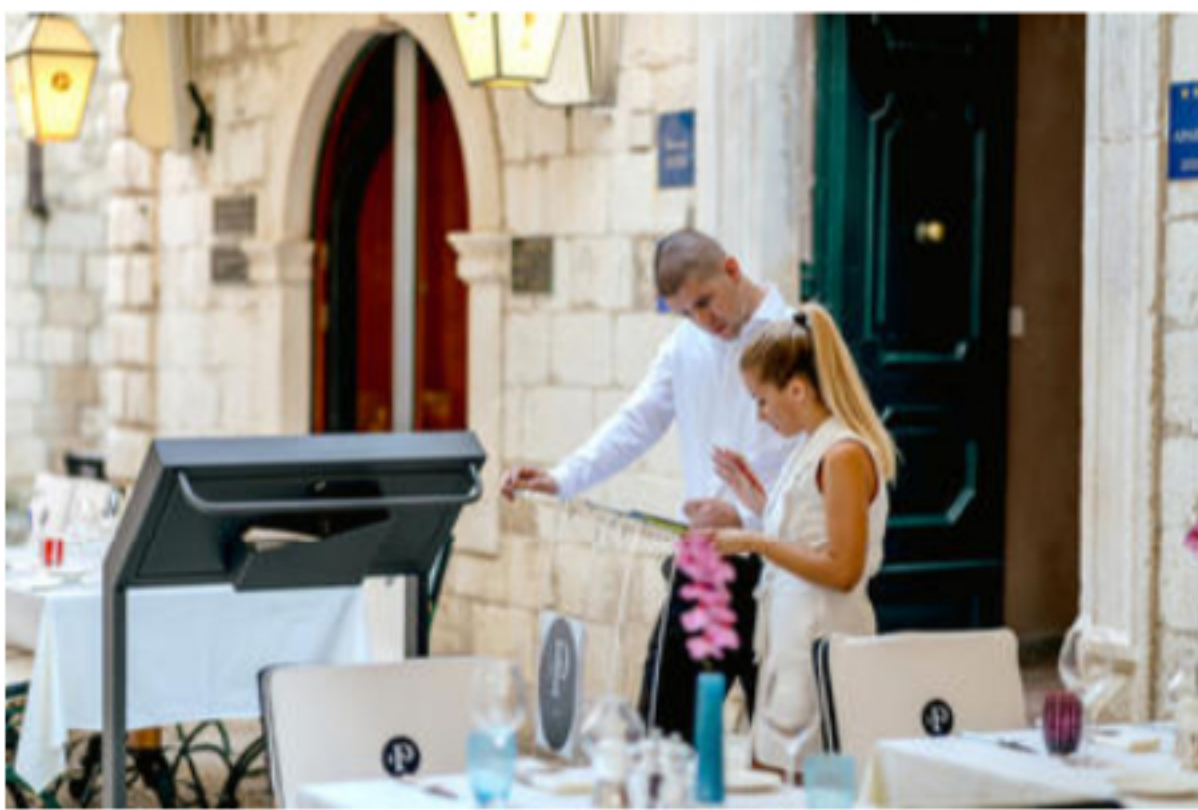

"The Adriatic is the final common destination of the waters of the whole region, and therefore must be safeguarded with a common method and as a common good". The CrossWater project looks to the two Adriatic shores and the sustainable management of water services

COOPERATION Adriatic-Ionian Region: in search of ecological corridors

Maria Francesca Rita | 27/1/2022

Green infrastructure, ecological corridors. What are they and how could they contribute to improving the environment in the Adriatic-Ionian region? We talked about it with Senad Oprasic, head of the environmental protection department of the Ministry of Foreign Trade and Economic Relations of Bosnia and Herzegovina and coordinator of one of the thematic areas of EUSAIR

ECONOMY Tourism in Croatia: the contribution of European cohesion policies

Klaudijo Klaser | 18/1/2022

Between 2014 and 2020, a significant portion of the funds granted by the EU cohesion policy in Croatia went on training, with numerous projects focused on the tourism sector

REPORTAGE The other Dubrovnik

Dubrovnik | Giovanni Vale | 22/12/2021

There is a district located just outside the historical centre of Dubrovnik which offers a valid alternative to big luxury city hotels. It is the industrial area of Gruz, with its old Carbon Graphite Products Factory (TUP), which young local creatives have transformed into a vibrant space thanks to EU funds

REGIONS OF EUROPE Cooperation between territories to relaunch enlargement to the Western Balkans

Serena Epis | 4/1/2022
